5. Summary/Purpose:

This bill would create a "sales tax holiday" by providing a temporary exemption from the sales and use tax for certain items of tangible personal property. The exemption would occur on an annual basis, beginning in 2006, and would be in effect for a three-day period starting the first Friday in August and ending at midnight on the first Sunday in August. The exemption would apply on a per item basis to:

- School supplies with a selling price of $20 or less, including but not limited to, dictionaries, notebooks, pens, pencils, notebook paper, and calculators, and
- Clothing or footwear with a selling price of $100 or less.

In addition to an exemption for school related supplies, this bill allows a dealer to absorb the sales tax on the sale of any item during the exemption period.

This bill requires TAX to develop guidelines describing the items eligible for the exemption, and make them available both electronically and in hard copy by July 15 of each year.

The effective date of this bill is not specified.

Generally

This bill would create a “sales tax holiday” by providing a temporary exemption from the sales and use tax for certain items of tangible personal property. The exemption would occur on an annual basis, beginning in 2006, and would be in effect for a three-day period starting the first Friday in August and ending at midnight on the first Sunday in August. The exemption would apply on a per item basis to school supplies with a selling price of $20 or less, including but not limited to, dictionaries, notebooks, pens, pencils, notebook paper, and calculators, and clothing or footwear with a selling price of $100 or less. The time period of this exemption, and the nature of the exempt items suggest that this bill is intended to primarily benefit purchases of back-to-school items.

In addition to school related items, this bill would allow dealers to elect to absorb the cost of the sales tax during the three-day exemption period. A dealer may elect to absorb the sales and use tax on the sale of any product and is not limited to absorbing the tax on the items eligible for the sales tax exemption. During this period, a dealer may advertise that he will absorb the sales and use tax without violating the general prohibition against doing so.

Impact on Dealers

Virginia dealers, including Internet and other remote retailers, who make sales of tangible personal property would be required to reprogram their cash registers or point-of-sale systems for a three-day period to account for the exemption period. All retailers would be required to base their taxability determinations on guidelines developed by TAX and made available in hard copy and electronically by July 15 of each year.

Other States

Other states that provide or have recently provided "sales tax holiday" exemptions from the sales tax are Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas.

Connecticut: Connecticut provides an exemption for clothing and footwear with a maximum cost of $300 for a seven-day period each August. This exemption began in 2001.

Florida: Florida provided a nine-day exemption period from July 23, 2005 to July 31, 2005 for clothing with a maximum cost of $50, school supplies with a maximum cost of $20, and computers with a maximum cost of $1,500.

Iowa: Iowa provides a two-day exemption each August for clothing and footwear with a maximum cost of $100.

Louisiana: Louisiana will provide an exemption for the first $2,500 of the sales or cost price of any consumer purchases of tangible personal property that occur December 16, 2005 through December 18, 2005.

Maryland: Maryland will provide an exemption for a five-day period from August 23, 2006 through August 27, 2006 for clothing and footwear with a maximum cost of $100.

Massachusetts: Massachusetts provided a two-day exemption from August 13 through August 14, 2005 for all retail items costing $2,500 or less.

Missouri: Missouri provides an annual three-day event beginning August 5 and ending August 7, in which articles of clothing with a maximum price of $100, school supplies with a maximum price of $50, computers with a maximum price of $3,500, and computer software with a maximum price of $350 will be exempt from sales and use tax.

New Mexico: New Mexico enacted legislation creating its first sales tax holiday in 2005. The annual three-day exemption includes clothing with a maximum cost of $100 per article, school supplies with a maximum cost of $15 per item and computers with a maximum cost of $1,000.

New York: New York has enacted a permanent exemption for clothing and footwear priced at $110 or less per item that began June 1, 2005. However, from January 31, 2005 through February 6, 2006, the state exempted items of clothing from state sales tax only.

North Carolina: North Carolina provided a three-day exemption in 2006 for clothing and school supplies with a maximum cost of $100, computers with a maximum price of $3,500, computer supplies with a maximum price of $250 per item and sport or recreational equipment with a maximum price of $50 per item. This holiday will occur each year.

South Carolina: South Carolina has enacted a three-day annual exemption for clothing, clothing accessories, footwear, school supplies, computers, printers and printer supplies, computer software, and various linens. This exemption is broader than other states' exemptions, as there are no price limitations on qualifying items.

Tennessee: Tennessee will provide an exemption for a three-day period beginning on the first Friday in August 2006 and ending the following Sunday. Exempt items will include clothing with a maximum sales price of $100 per item, school supplies with a maximum sales price of $100 per item and computers with a maximum sales price of $1,500 per item.

Texas: Texas provides an annual exemption in the first weekend of August for clothing and footwear priced at $100 or less per item.

District of Columbia: In 2004, the District adopted a law to hold ten-day sales tax holidays twice yearly, one to take place in late August and the other to take place during the last week of November. During the holiday, clothing, footwear, and accessories priced at $100 or less can be purchased tax-exempt. The August holiday also exempts school supplies.
