WHEREAS, throughout the ages women have been central to the perpetuation of society, and women of every nationality and race have left an indelible mark through their countless contributions, achievements, and accomplishments that have benefitted mankind; and

WHEREAS, from the founding of the Commonwealth, the genius and creativity of women and their presence and contributions have been evident in every aspect of Virginia history and the life of the people of the Commonwealth; however, they have received little appreciation, recognition, or official acknowledgement; and

WHEREAS, Western civilization's traditional social and cultural norms did not provide great visibility to women or afford them an opportunity to exercise their considerable abilities, gifts, and talents, and often suppressed the advancement of women; and

WHEREAS, with the advent of the 20th century, epochal changes in Western civilization have replaced old traditions with a fresh and more equitable view of the rights of women and minorities; and

WHEREAS, the beginning of a new century offers a propitious opportunity to recognize the unique contributions of Virginia women who have for over 400 years nurtured and protected their families, inspired others to achieve, and improved the quality of life in their communities; and

WHEREAS, Virginia's history is replete with great and significant feats of women, which have bolstered, enriched, strengthened, and sustained our citizens throughout the ages, including many noble and heroic deeds that were indispensable to the founding of the Commonwealth and the nation; and

WHEREAS, it is both fitting and appropriate to recognize and honor the contributions of Virginia's women, their ideals, vision, and spirit of sacrifice that illuminates the path today for those who will follow them, generation after generation; and

WHEREAS, such a tribute to Virginia's women on the grounds of the State Capitol would signal the importance and appreciation of their contributions and achievements to the Commonwealth and the nation, and an appropriate memorial should be considered with care and deliberation; now, therefore, be it
