1971: The College becomes a four-year, baccalaureate degree-granting institution;

1977: The General Assembly separates the College from The College of William and Mary, provides for it to have its own board of visitors, and changes its name to Christopher Newport College;

1992: Having initiated programs of study leading to masterial degrees in 1991, Christopher Newport College becomes Christopher Newport University; and

1994: The University opens its first residence hall; and

WHEREAS, on January 1, 1996, Senator Paul Triple answered the call of the University's board of visitors to become the fifth president of Christopher Newport University and provided the vision and leadership to transform the University into one of the most selective seats of liberal learning in the Commonwealth—with a gifted student body of 5,000 drawn from throughout the Commonwealth and beyond and a talented student-centered faculty of 250 educated at the nation's (and the world's) finest graduate schools; and

WHEREAS, since 1995, the campus of Christopher Newport University has expanded from its original 75 acres to its present 260 acres, and its buildings, including the Ferguson Center for the Arts, are transforming the University's setting into one of the most beautiful anywhere; and

WHEREAS, the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia's current list of 25 "peer institutions" for the University (i.e., those institutions that most closely resemble it) includes such familiar names as Washington and Lee University and the University of Richmond—thereby affirming the academic stature that Christopher Newport University has now attained; now, therefore, be it
