Other comments: The Bureau of Insurance currently reviews the results of all pre-licensing examinations on a monthly basis to determine any significant deviations in examination pass rates which may require immediate action. In addition, the Bureau and its licensing vendor conduct an examination review workshop annually with insurance industry representatives and Bureau staff subject matter experts to review each question's performance, validity, and fairness and to ensure that each is legally defensible for minimally competent entry level candidates. A course content outline is developed for each examination to provide candidates with the subject matter tested on the examination. Virginia Insurance School Summary reports are also posted on the Bureau's website as they reflect each insurance school's pass/fail rates. The pass rate for first time test takers for all agent examinations in 2011 was 69%. The pass rate for first time test takers for the Life & Annuities examination in 2011 was 66%. New passing standards for Virginia examinations were implemented in November 2010. New retest rules for Virginia examinations went into effect in April 2011.
