Patron Prior to Engrossment—Delegate Leftwich

Referred to Committee for Courts of Justice

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Virginia:

1. That § 20-107.3 of the Code of Virginia is amended and reenacted and that the Code of Virginia is amended by adding a section numbered 20-107.1:1 as follows:

§ 20-107.1:1. Court may decree as to maintenance or renewal of life insurance policy.

A. Upon entry of a decree providing for (i) the dissolution of a marriage, (ii) a divorce, whether from the bond of matrimony or from bed and board, or (iii) separate maintenance, where an order for spousal support or separate maintenance has been entered by the court, the court may order a party to (a) maintain any existing life insurance policy on the insured party's life that was purchased during the marriage, is issued through the insured's employment, or is within effective control of the insured, provided that the party so ordered has the right to designate a beneficiary; (b) [ ~~renew~~ apply for reinstatement of ] any existing life insurance policy on the insured party's life that has lapsed or been cancelled during the marriage, provided that the party so ordered has the right to designate a beneficiary and provided that the policy may be renewed or reinstated pursuant to its terms; (c) designate the other party as beneficiary of all or a portion of the death benefit of such life insurance for so long as the insured party so ordered has an obligation to pay spousal support to the other party, provided that the party so ordered has the right to designate a beneficiary; (d) allocate the premium cost of such life insurance between the parties, provided that all premiums shall be billed to the policyholder; and (e) order the insured party to execute all appropriate forms or written consents to require the insurer to provide information to the party beneficiary as to the good standing of the policy and the maintenance of that party as beneficiary to the extent required by the order entered pursuant to this section. The obligation to maintain such life insurance so ordered shall cease upon the termination of the party's obligation to pay spousal support or separate maintenance.

B. In making a determination under subsection A, the court shall consider:

- 1. The age, health, and insurability of the insured party;
2. The age and health of the payee spouse;
3. The cost of the life insurance policy;
4. The amount and term of the award of spousal support or separate maintenance;
5. The prevailing insurance rates at the time of the order;
6. The ability of either spouse to pay the premium cost of the life insurance; and
7. Such other factors as the court deems necessary or appropriate to consider in order to arrive at a fair order.

C. Upon motion of either party, any order entered pursuant to this section may be modified or the obligation to maintain life insurance terminated upon a material change of circumstances in consideration of the factors set forth in subsection B.

D. Nothing in this section shall be construed to create an independent cause of action on the part of any beneficiary against the insurer or to require an insurer to provide information relating to such policy to any person other than the policyholder without the written consent of the policyholder or unless ordered by the court.

E. Nothing in this section shall be construed to require an insurance company to renew or reinstate any insurance policy other than as provided in such insurance policy.

§ 20-107.3. Court may decree as to property and debts of the parties.

A. Upon decreeing the dissolution of a marriage, and also upon decreeing a divorce from the bond of matrimony, or upon the filing with the court as provided in subsection J of a certified copy of a final divorce decree obtained without the Commonwealth, the court, upon request of either party, (i) shall determine the legal title as between the parties, and the ownership and value of all property, real or personal, tangible or intangible, of the parties and shall consider which of such property is separate property, which is marital property, and which is part separate and part marital property in accordance with subdivision A 3 and (ii) shall determine the nature of all debts of the parties, or either of them, and shall consider which of such debts is separate debt and which is marital debt. The court shall determine

59 the value of any such property as of the date of the evidentiary hearing on the evaluation issue. The 60 court shall determine the amount of any such debt as of the date of the last separation of the parties, if 61 at such time or thereafter at least one of the parties intends that the separation be permanent, and the 62 extent to which such debt has increased or decreased from the date of separation until the date of the 63 evidentiary hearing. Upon motion of either party made no less than 21 days before the evidentiary 64 hearing the court may, for good cause shown, in order to attain the ends of justice, order that a different 65 valuation date be used. The court, on the motion of either party, may retain jurisdiction in the final 66 decree of divorce to adjudicate the remedy provided by this section when the court determines that such 67 action is clearly necessary, and all decrees heretofore entered retaining such jurisdiction are validated.

68 1. Separate property is (i) all property, real and personal, acquired by either party before the 69 marriage; (ii) all property acquired during the marriage by bequest, devise, descent, survivorship or gift 70 from a source other than the other party; (iii) all property acquired during the marriage in exchange for 71 or from the proceeds of sale of separate property, provided that such property acquired during the 72 marriage is maintained as separate property; and (iv) that part of any property classified as separate 73 pursuant to subdivision A 3. Income received from separate property during the marriage is separate 74 property if not attributable to the personal effort of either party. The increase in value of separate 75 property during the marriage is separate property, unless marital property or the personal efforts of either 76 party have contributed to such increases and then only to the extent of the increases in value attributable 77 to such contributions. The personal efforts of either party must be significant and result in substantial 78 appreciation of the separate property if any increase in value attributable thereto is to be considered 79 marital property.

80 2. Marital property is (i) all property titled in the names of both parties, whether as joint tenants, 81 tenants by the entirety or otherwise, except as provided by subdivision A 3, (ii) that part of any property 82 classified as marital pursuant to subdivision A 3, or (iii) all other property acquired by each party during 83 the marriage which is not separate property as defined above. All property including that portion of 84 pensions, profit-sharing or deferred compensation or retirement plans of whatever nature, acquired by 85 either spouse during the marriage, and before the last separation of the parties, if at such time or 86 thereafter at least one of the parties intends that the separation be permanent, is presumed to be marital 87 property in the absence of satisfactory evidence that it is separate property. For purposes of this section 88 marital property is presumed to be jointly owned unless there is a deed, title or other clear indicia that it 89 is not jointly owned.

90 3. The court shall classify property as part marital property and part separate property as follows:

91 a. In the case of income received from separate property during the marriage, such income shall be 92 marital property only to the extent it is attributable to the personal efforts of either party. In the case of 93 the increase in value of separate property during the marriage, such increase in value shall be marital 94 property only to the extent that marital property or the personal efforts of either party have contributed 95 to such increases, provided that any such personal efforts must be significant and result in substantial 96 appreciation of the separate property.

97 For purposes of this subdivision, the nonowning spouse shall bear the burden of proving that (i) 98 contributions of marital property or personal effort were made and (ii) the separate property increased in 99 value. Once this burden of proof is met, the owning spouse shall bear the burden of proving that the 100 increase in value or some portion thereof was not caused by contributions of marital property or 101 personal effort.

102 "Personal effort" of a party shall be deemed to be labor, effort, inventiveness, physical or intellectual 103 skill, creativity, or managerial, promotional or marketing activity applied directly to the separate property 104 of either party.

105 b. In the case of any pension, profit-sharing, or deferred compensation plan or retirement benefit, the 106 marital share as defined in subsection G shall be marital property.

107 c. In the case of any personal injury or workers' compensation recovery of either party, the marital 108 share as defined in subsection H shall be marital property.

109 d. When marital property and separate property are commingled by contributing one category of 110 property to another, resulting in the loss of identity of the contributed property, the classification of the 111 contributed property shall be transmuted to the category of property receiving the contribution. However, 112 to the extent the contributed property is retraceable by a preponderance of the evidence and was not a 113 gift, such contributed property shall retain its original classification.

114 e. When marital property and separate property are commingled into newly acquired property 115 resulting in the loss of identity of the contributing properties, the commingled property shall be deemed 116 transmuted to marital property. However, to the extent the contributed property is retraceable by a 117 preponderance of the evidence and was not a gift, the contributed property shall retain its original 118 classification.

119 f. When separate property is retitled in the joint names of the parties, the retitled property shall be 120 deemed transmuted to marital property. However, to the extent the property is retraceable by a

121 preponderance of the evidence and was not a gift, the retitled property shall retain its original 122 classification.

123 g. When the separate property of one party is commingled into the separate property of the other 124 party, or the separate property of each party is commingled into newly acquired property, to the extent 125 the contributed property is retraceable by a preponderance of the evidence and was not a gift, each party 126 shall be reimbursed the value of the contributed property in any award made pursuant to this section.

127 h. Subdivisions A 3 d, e and f shall apply to jointly owned property. No presumption of gift shall 128 arise under this section where (i) separate property is commingled with jointly owned property; (ii) 129 newly acquired property is conveyed into joint ownership; or (iii) existing property is conveyed or 130 retitled into joint ownership. For purposes of this subdivision A 3, property is jointly owned when it is 131 titled in the name of both parties, whether as joint tenants, tenants by the entireties, or otherwise.

132 4. Separate debt is (i) all debt incurred by either party before the marriage, (ii) all debt incurred by 133 either party after the date of the last separation of the parties, if at such time or thereafter at least one of 134 the parties intends that the separation be permanent, and (iii) that part of any debt classified as separate 135 pursuant to subdivision A 5. However, to the extent that a party can show by a preponderance of the 136 evidence that the debt was incurred for the benefit of the marriage or family, the court may designate 137 the debt as marital.

138 5. Marital debt is (i) all debt incurred in the joint names of the parties before the date of the last 139 separation of the parties, if at such time or thereafter at least one of the parties intends that the 140 separation be permanent, whether incurred before or after the date of the marriage, and (ii) all debt 141 incurred in either party's name after the date of the marriage and before the date of the last separation of 142 the parties, if at such time or thereafter at least one of the parties intends that the separation be 143 permanent. However, to the extent that a party can show by a preponderance of the evidence that the 144 debt, or a portion thereof, was incurred, or the proceeds secured by incurring the debt were used, in 145 whole or in part, for a nonmarital purpose, the court may designate the entire debt as separate or a 146 portion of the debt as marital and a portion of the debt as separate.

147 B. For the purposes of this section only, both parties shall be deemed to have rights and interests in 148 the marital property. However, such interests and rights shall not attach to the legal title of such 149 property and are only to be used as a consideration in determining a monetary award, if any, as 150 provided in this section.

151 C. Except as provided in subsection G, the court shall have no authority to order the division or 152 transfer of separate property or marital property, or separate or marital debt, which is not jointly owned 153 or owed. However, upon a finding that separate property of one party is in the possession or control of 154 the other party, the court may order that the property be transferred to the party whose separate property 155 it is. The court may, based upon the factors listed in subsection E, divide or transfer or order the 156 division or transfer, or both, of jointly owned marital property, jointly owed marital debt, or any part 157 thereof. The court shall also have the authority to apportion and order the payment of the debts of the 158 parties, or either of them, that are incurred prior to the dissolution of the marriage, based upon the 159 factors listed in subsection E.

160 As a means of dividing or transferring the jointly owned marital property, the court may transfer or 161 order the transfer of real or personal property or any interest therein to one of the parties, permit either 162 party to purchase the interest of the other and direct the allocation of the proceeds, provided the party 163 purchasing the interest of the other agrees to assume any indebtedness secured by the property, or order 164 its sale by private sale by the parties, through such agent as the court shall direct, or by public sale as 165 the court shall direct without the necessity for partition. All decrees entered prior to July 1, 1991, which 166 are final and not subject to further proceedings on appeal as of that date, which divide or transfer or 167 order the division or transfer of property directly between the parties are hereby validated and deemed 168 self-executing. All orders or decrees which divide or transfer or order division or transfer of real 169 property between the parties shall be recorded and indexed in the names of the parties in the appropriate 170 grantor and grantee indexes in the land records in the clerk's office of the circuit court of the county or 171 city in which the property is located.

172 D. In addition, based upon (i) the equities and the rights and interests of each party in the marital 173 property, and (ii) the factors listed in subsection E, the court has the power to grant a monetary award, 174 payable either in a lump sum or over a period of time in fixed amounts, to either party. The party 175 against whom a monetary award is made may satisfy the award, in whole or in part, by conveyance of 176 property, subject to the approval of the court. An award entered pursuant to this subsection shall 177 constitute a judgment within the meaning of § 8.01-426 and shall not be docketed by the clerk unless 178 the decree so directs. An award entered pursuant to this subsection may be enforceable in the same 179 manner as any other money judgment. The provisions of § 8.01-382, relating to interest on judgments, 180 shall apply unless the court orders otherwise.

181 Any marital property, which has been considered or ordered transferred in granting the monetary

182 award under this section, shall not thereafter be the subject of a suit between the same parties to transfer 183 title or possession of such property.

184 E. The amount of any division or transfer of jointly owned marital property, and the amount of any 185 monetary award, the apportionment of marital debts, and the method of payment shall be determined by 186 the court after consideration of the following factors:

187 1. The contributions, monetary and nonmonetary, of each party to the well-being of the family;

188 2. The contributions, monetary and nonmonetary, of each party in the acquisition and care and 189 maintenance of such marital property of the parties;

190 3. The duration of the marriage;

191 4. The ages and physical and mental condition of the parties;

192 5. The circumstances and factors which contributed to the dissolution of the marriage, specifically 193 including any ground for divorce under the provisions of subdivision A (1), (3) or (6) of § 20-91 or 194 § 20-95;

195 6. How and when specific items of such marital property were acquired;

196 7. The debts and liabilities of each spouse, the basis for such debts and liabilities, and the property 197 which may serve as security for such debts and liabilities;

198 8. The liquid or nonliquid character of all marital property;

199 9. The tax consequences to each party;

200 10. The use or expenditure of marital property by either of the parties for a nonmarital separate 201 purpose or the dissipation of such funds, when such was done in anticipation of divorce or separation or 202 after the last separation of the parties; and

203 11. Such other factors as the court deems necessary or appropriate to consider in order to arrive at a 204 fair and equitable monetary award.

205 F. The court shall determine the amount of any such monetary award without regard to maintenance 206 and support awarded for either party or support for the minor children of both parties and shall, after or 207 at the time of such determination and upon motion of either party, consider whether an order for support 208 and maintenance of a spouse or children shall be entered or, if previously entered, whether such order 209 shall be modified or vacated.

210 G. In addition to the monetary award made pursuant to subsection D, and upon consideration of the 211 factors set forth in subsection E:

212 1. The court may direct payment of a percentage of the marital share of any pension, profit-sharing 213 or deferred compensation plan or retirement benefits, whether vested or nonvested, which constitutes 214 marital property and whether payable in a lump sum or over a period of time. The court may order 215 direct payment of such percentage of the marital share by direct assignment to a party from the 216 employer trustee, plan administrator or other holder of the benefits. However, the court shall only direct 217 that payment be made as such benefits are payable. No such payment shall exceed 50 percent of the 218 marital share of the cash benefits actually received by the party against whom such award is made.
219 "Marital share" means that portion of the total interest, the right to which was earned during the 220 marriage and before the last separation of the parties, if at such time or thereafter at least one of the 221 parties intended that the separation be permanent.

222 2. To the extent permitted by federal or other applicable law, the court may order a party to 223 designate a spouse or former spouse as irrevocable beneficiary during the lifetime of the beneficiary of 224 all or a portion of any survivor benefit or annuity plan of whatsoever nature, but not to include a life 225 insurance policy except to the extent permitted by § 20-107.1:1. The court, in its discretion, shall 226 determine as between the parties, who shall bear the costs of maintaining such plan.

227 H. In addition to the monetary award made pursuant to subsection D, and upon consideration of the 228 factors set forth in subsection E, the court may direct payment of a percentage of the marital share of 229 any personal injury or workers' compensation recovery of either party, whether such recovery is payable 230 in a lump sum or over a period of time. However, the court shall only direct that payment be made as 231 such recovery is payable, whether by settlement, jury award, court award, or otherwise. "Marital share" 232 means that part of the total personal injury or workers' compensation recovery attributable to lost wages 233 or medical expenses to the extent not covered by health insurance accruing during the marriage and 234 before the last separation of the parties, if at such time or thereafter at least one of the parties intended 235 that the separation be permanent.

236 I. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the affirmation, ratification and incorporation 237 in a decree of an agreement between the parties pursuant to §§ 20-109 and 20-109.1. Agreements, 238 otherwise valid as contracts, entered into between spouses prior to the marriage shall be recognized and 239 enforceable.

240 J. A court of proper jurisdiction under § 20-96 may exercise the powers conferred by this section 241 after a court of a foreign jurisdiction has decreed a dissolution of a marriage or a divorce from the bond 242 of matrimony, if (i) one of the parties was domiciled in this Commonwealth when the foreign 243 proceedings were commenced, (ii) the foreign court did not have personal jurisdiction over the party

244 domiciled in the Commonwealth, (iii) the proceeding is initiated within two years of receipt of notice of 245 the foreign decree by the party domiciled in the Commonwealth, and (iv) the court obtains personal 246 jurisdiction over the parties pursuant to subdivision A 9 of § 8.01-328.1, or in any other manner 247 permitted by law.

248 K. The court shall have the continuing authority and jurisdiction to make any additional orders 249 necessary to effectuate and enforce any order entered pursuant to this section, including the authority to:

250 1. Order a date certain for transfer or division of any jointly owned property under subsection C or 251 payment of any monetary award under subsection D;

252 2. Punish as contempt of court any willful failure of a party to comply with the provisions of any 253 order made by the court under this section;

254 3. Appoint a special commissioner to transfer any property under subsection C where a party refuses 255 to comply with the order of the court to transfer such property; and 256 4. Modify any order entered in a case filed on or after July 1, 1982, intended to affect or divide any 257 pension, profit-sharing or deferred compensation plan or retirement benefits pursuant to the United States 258 Internal Revenue Code or other applicable federal laws, only for the purpose of establishing or 259 maintaining the order as a qualified domestic relations order or to revise or conform its terms so as to 260 effectuate the expressed intent of the order.

261 L. If it appears upon or after the entry of a final decree of divorce from the bond of matrimony that 262 neither party resides in the city or county of the circuit court that entered the decree, the court may, on 263 the motion of any party or on its own motion, transfer to the circuit court for the city or county where 264 either party resides the authority to make additional orders pursuant to subsection K or to carry out or 265 enforce any stipulation, contract, or agreement between the parties that has been affirmed, ratified, and 266 incorporated by reference pursuant to § 20-109.1.
