WHEREAS, the Alexandria Library Company was legally recognized by the Virginia General Assembly in 1798; and

WHEREAS, its successor agency, the Alexandria Library Association, retained custody of the Alexandria Library Company's books in 1897; and

WHEREAS, the Alexandria Library Association entered into an agreement with the City of Alexandria in 1937 to transform the subscription library into a public library and establish a governing board; and

WHEREAS, on August 21, 1939, five young black men organized by civil rights lawyer Samuel Tucker—Edward Gaddis, Morris Murray, William Evans, Clarence Strange, and Otto Tucker—visited the library and requested library cards, and upon having their requests denied, selected books off the shelves, sat down, and read them; and

WHEREAS, while the Alexandria Library system remained segregated into the 1960s, it is today a safe and inclusive place for people of all races and cultures; and
