SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 295

Senate Amendments in [] — January 30, 1997

Establishing a joint subcommittee to study alternative means of ensuring compliance by attorneys with the obligation to provide pro bono legal services.

Patrons—Gartlan; Delegate: Almand

Referred to the Committee on Rules

WHEREAS, the preamble to the Virginia Code of Professional Responsibility governing attorneys licensed by the Commonwealth states that "[t]he Canons are statements of axiomatic norms, expressing in general terms the standards of professional conduct expected of lawyers in their relationships with the public, with the legal system and with the legal profession"; and

WHEREAS, Canon 2 provides that "A lawyer should assist the legal profession in fulfilling its duty to make legal counsel available and should render pro bono publico legal services"; and

WHEREAS, some national surveys suggest that there is at least an 80% gap between the legal representation needs of our indigent public and the services being provided due, at least in part, to reductions in governmental funding for legal services programs for the poor and increases in the populations served by these programs; and

WHEREAS, lawyers have met rigorous educational requirements, have been certified to be of honest demeanor and good moral conduct and, as a result, enjoy a unique status and ability to represent others in securing the ends of justice before the courts; and

WHEREAS, due to this unique status, it is incumbent upon lawyers to fulfill their obligation to ensure that all persons have access to the means necessary to protect life, liberty and property through our judicial system; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED by the Senate, the House of Delegates concurring, That a joint subcommittee be established to study alternative means of ensuring compliance by attorneys with the obligation to provide pro bono legal services and ensuring that all persons have meaningful access to the courts.
