4. Title: Virginia Freedom of Information Act; law-enforcement criminal incident information; criminal investigative files

5. Summary: The bill amends §2.2-3706 and provides that all public bodies engaged in criminal law enforcement activities must provide criminal incident information relating to felony offenses contained in any report, notes, electronic communication, or other document, including filings through an incident-based reporting system upon request. Such information shall include: a general description of the criminal activity reported; the date and time the alleged crime was committed; the general location where the alleged crime was committed; the identity of the investigating officer or other point of contact; a description of any injuries suffered or property damaged or stolen; and any diagrams related to the alleged crime of the location where it was committed, except any that are exempted from mandatory disclosure elsewhere in the Code but may be disclosed by the custodian in his discretion, except where disclosure is prohibited by law. The bill also requires the release of criminal investigative files, defined as any documents and information, including complaints, court orders, memoranda, notes, initial incident reports, filings through any incident-based reporting system, diagrams, maps, photographs, correspondence, reports, witness statements, or evidence, relating to a criminal investigation or proceeding that is not ongoing.

According to the bill, the above provisions do not apply if a court in the locality wherein the public body is located finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the release of such information: would interfere with a particular ongoing criminal investigation or proceeding in a particularly identifiable manner; would deprive a person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication; would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy; would disclose (i) the identity of a confidential source or (ii) in the case of a record compiled by a law enforcement agency in the course of a criminal investigation, information furnished only by a confidential source; would disclose law enforcement investigative techniques and procedures, if such disclosure could reasonably be expected to risk circumvention of the law; or would endanger the life or physical safety of any individual.

Exceptions are provided for photographic, audio, video, or other records depicting a victim or allowing for a victim to be readily identified, except for transcripts of recorded interviews between a victim and law enforcement. These cannot be released to anyone except the victim; members of the immediate family of the victim, if the victim is deceased, or the parent or guardian of the victim, if the victim is a minor. In the event of a conflict between this section as it relates to requests made under this section and other provisions of law, this section controls except to the extent that the other provision of law provides for more protections for a juvenile, victim, witness, undercover officer, or confidential source or family members of such juvenile, victim, witness, undercover officer, or confidential source.

6. Budget Amendment Necessary: Yes, Items 57 and 427.
7. Fiscal Impact Estimates: Preliminary. See Item 8 below.
8. Fiscal Implications: According to the Department of State Police (VSP), the agency's FOIA office handled approximately 3,831 requests in calendar year 2019. Of the denied cases, 275 were denied closed criminal cases which could be subject to release under the provisions of the proposed legislation. The agency has criminal investigation files dating to the 1940's in various formats (including paper, microfilm, and electronic media). The average criminal investigation exceeds 50 pages and contains a combination of investigative documents, video files, and photographs. According to VSP, each page of each file would be required to be reviewed to comply with the victim information redaction requirements of the bill. VSP estimates each FOIA request would require a minimum of five hours to research and prepare. The agency estimates it would need two program support technician positions, at an annual cost of $72,537 each (salary and benefits), to comply with the proposed bill. VSP also estimates it would need additional funding for office space, furniture, and office supplies, including high-capacity thumb drives; the agency estimates it would cost $116,960 the first year for office space rental, office furniture, information technology services and equipment, postage, and miscellaneous office supplies. The agency anticipates $81,207 in ongoing expenses per year for office space rental, information technology services, postage, and office supplies.

The fiscal impact statement is being revised based upon new information received from the Office of the Attorney General (OAG). According to the OAG, the proposed legislation would result in an increase in litigation as OAG represents state law enforcement agencies in FOIA cases. The bill requires court involvement to prove by a preponderance of evidence the withholding of information by law enforcement. OAG estimates it will need two attorney positions and one administrative staff position, at an estimated cost of $404,273 annually, to respond to the requirements of this bill.

Upon further review, according to the Department of Wildlife Resources (DWR), any additional workload could be absorbed within the agency's current resources. A portion of any additional expenses to DWR as a result of the provisions of this bill could be recuperated through fees charged for FOIA request fulfillment. Any potential additional fiscal impact on DWR will be nominal, according to the agency.

There is no anticipated fiscal impact as a result of the provisions of this bill on the Division of Capitol Police (DCP), the Office of the State Inspector General (OSIG), the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), the Department of Corrections (DOC), the Marine Resources Commission (MRC), or the Office of the Attorney General (OAG). Any potential fiscal impact on other state or local law enforcement agencies cannot be determined at this time. The fiscal impact statement will be updated if additional information is made available by law enforcement agencies.
